A: This is a very simple question. I assume you already know about the ellipse equation. $area = \pi \sqrt{(a^2 + b^2)}$ Where a is the semi major axis and b is the semi minor axis. And if you need to find the area when you don't know the shape, you can use: $area = \pi r^2 \sin(\theta)$ r is the radius of the ellipse. And theta is the angle between the major axis and the x axis, or the angle between the minor axis and the y axis. The sin function will give you the ratio between the two axes. You need to multiply with the number 4 for $4r^2 = 16r^2$. That will give you the square of the minor axis. So if you combine both you get: $area = \pi r^2 \sin(\theta) / 16$ And r is the semi major axis. Q:
